* The Books of the Office at this period make no distinction of the Ingots imported into the Mint, in regard to their being the produce of Foreign Gold or light Guineas melted down. If any cognizance is ever taken in this particular, it is never officially done, but proceeds from the accidental private enquiry of some individual of the Office, who has noted the difference; and therefore any traditional or bye Statements (which indeed in this case do not appear attainable) would, at so remote a period as the date of this Account, be very vague and uncertain; and hence the impossibility Impossibility of completing the Account in these columns, as directed by the Order of the House. The Broad Pieces were Portugal Gold Monies, received into the Mint by virtue of a Proclamation 26th February 1732-3, pursuant to an Address of the House of Commons (vide Act 6 Geo. II. ch. 26.) at the rate of £. 4. 1. per ounce, and being melted into Ingots, were coined into the current Coin of the Realm.
