

205-6

9 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

0119

A N
ENQUIRY
INTO THE CONDUCT
OF OUR
DOMESTICK AFFAIRS,

From the YEAR 1721, to the PRESENT TIME.

In which the Case of our NATIONAL DEBTS,
the SINKING FUND, and all EXTRAORDINARY
GRANTS OF MONEY are particularly consider'd.

BEING A SEQUEL
TO POLITICKS on both Sides.

The SECOND EDITION corrected.

L O N D O N:
Printed by H. Haines, at Mr. FRANKLIN'S in Russel-street, Covent-Garden. 1734. (Pr. 1 s.)

A N

ENQUIRY

INTO THE

CONDUCT

OF OUR

Domestick Affairs, &c.

HAVING already given the Publick a State of our Affairs abroad, and traced the present Disturbances of Europe from their true Source, by an impartial Deduction of our Negotiations, for several Years past; I shall now proceed, in Pursuance of my Promise, to an Examination of our Conduct at home; from whence it will appear how exactly our foreign and domestick Affairs have kept pace with each other, and jointly contributed to our present Situation.

For this Reason, I shall begin my Observations from the Conclusion of the memorable Year 1720, when the greatest Expectations were raised in the Kingdom by that extraordinary Genius, who undertook to relieve the general Distress, to restore our national Credit, and fix it again upon a lasting Foundation. Indeed, nothing less could be expected from One, who always valued Himself for a peculiar Knowledge in the true Nature, Use, and Extent of publick Credit; a Characteristick not much disputed at that Time, as it was supported by the Country Gentleman's appearing in Business again.

(4)

But to the great Disappointment of the Publick, as well as the unhappy Sufferers of the South Sea Company, these notable Promises ended in the * Act of Ingraftment, which remains upon Record as an unquestionable Proof of his Sagacity and Ability in such Matters.

If We add to this Scheme another from the same Hand, some Time before, for † ingrafting the whole Capital of the Bank into the South Sea Company, valuing the latter at 600l. per Cent. with several excellent Reasonings on the national Debt, We shall have a farther View of his Knowledge and Improvement in Things of this delicate Nature.

But to put this Point beyond all Dispute, I propose to lay before the Publick some Transactions, of a domestick Nature, for several Years past, which seem to deserve their utmost Attention.

I shall chiefly confine my self, in this Discourse, to our late extraordinary Grants of Money, the Case of the sinking Fund, and the present State of the national Debt; for as these Articles are allow'd

* See an Act 7mo Georg. 1. and Cato's Letters, vol. 1. p. 44. 3d Edit.

† Considerations on the national Debts, &c. printed for Franklin in the Year 1729.

(5) low'd to be of the highest Importance to the Kingdom, so an Enquiry into the Management of them will set the Merit and Abilities of a British Minister in the truest Light.

As I design to treat this Part of the Subject with the same Regard to Veracity, which was observed in the other, I shall mention no Facts without Parliamentary Authority, or such other Vouchers, as seem to carry the same Evidence; nor will I make any Reflections upon them, or draw any Inferences from them, but what I am fully convinced are just and natural.

To avoid Confusion, I will consider our Expences under a few distinct Heads; viz.

Additional Grants to the CIVIL LIST;

VOTES OF CREDIT, which may be very justly esteem'd Supplies of the same Kind, under a different Name;

Annual Provisions for the NAVY and ARMY, with the several other Articles of Expence, for the CURRENT SERVICES OF THE YEAR.

After the great Calamity of the Year 1720, which had in a Manner overpread the whole Kingdom with Distress, and the Assurances from the Throne that the * Face of our Affairs abroad was become more favourable; that the Peace in the South wanted only the Form of a Congress, and That of the North was brought much nearer to a Conclusion; it was reasonably hoped that the utmost Tenderness would be shewn to a People in such Circumstances, and that no unusual Supplies would this Year, at least, be required from Them.

But towards the End of that very long and busy Session, after Provision had been made for all the current Services of the Year, a very extraordinary Demand

* See his late Majesty's Speech, at opening the Parliament, in the Year 1721.

(6)

Demand was made, by a Message from the Crown, for a Subsidy of 72,000 l. to the King of Sweden. This Message was received with great Surprize and Concern by the most zealous Wellwishers to his Majesty's Government. It was intimated that this Money might very possibly be intended to facilitate the securing a Possession, the Acquisition of which had already been the Source of many Troubles in Europe, and might yet be attended with Consequences, which would be felt by the latest Posterity. It was added, that this Demand was a very grievous Addition to our Expences, in maintaining a great Fleet in the Baltick; besides, it was well known that, during the Rupture between the two Crowns, the Swedes had committed great Depredations upon our Trade; and it was to be hoped that no Briton would ever consent that the Treasure of this Nation should, on any Pretence whatsoever, be issued to that Crown, till full Satisfaction was made to our plundered Merchants. But besides this Sum, eight thousand Pounds more was granted in the Year 1723; and the Petition of the poor Merchants, for Relief of their great and heavy Losses, was ordered to lye upon the Table; whilst our Neighbours, who had long reap'd the Advantages of our Quarrels, by the Improvement of their Trade, saw, with Astonishment, the most profuse Applauses bestow'd on these Measures.

Some Days after this Message from the Crown, there was another delivered to the House, desiring an extraordinary Supply for the Civil List; in which there being some Things worth Notice, I shall give it the Reader at length.

G. R.

“ HIS Majesty finds it necessary to acquaint “ His loyal House of Commons with the “ Difficulties He labours under, by Reason of “ Debts

(7)

“ Debts contracted in his civil Government; which,
 “ being computed at Lady-day last, do amount to “ more than five hundred and fifty thousand “ Pounds. If the Provision, made by an * Act “ of the last Session of Parliament, for discharging
 “ this Debt, had not hitherto proved in a very “ great Degree ineffectual, his Majesty had not “ been under a Necessity of applying again to “ Parliament, upon this Occasion; but being re“ solved to cause a Retrenchment to be made of “ his Civil-List Expences for the future, and find“ ing that such a Retrenchment cannot well be “ effected, without discharging the present Ar“ rears, hath ordered the Accounts thereof to be “ laid before the House, and hopes He may be “ empower'd to raise ready Money, for that Pur“ pose, on the Civil-List Revenues; which, to a“ void the laying any new Burthen on his People,
 “ his Majesty proposes shall be replaced to the “ Civil-List, and reimburs'd, by a Deduction to “ be made out of the Salaries and Wages of all “ Offices, and the Pensions and other Payments
 “ from the Crown.

The Provision, hinted at in this Message, was the Sum of 600,000 l. which was to have been paid by the two Assurance Companies for their Charters, granted in the Year 1720. But these Gentlemen having represented that, by their common Sufferings with the Rest of the Nation in that unhappy Year, They were not able to pay more than half the Sum They had promised to lend the Crown, the other Moyety of three hundred thousand Pounds was remitted to them; and though the Message says that this Money would have been sufficient to have satisfy'd the Debts of the Civil-List in the Year 1720; yet, in the Year 1721,

In 1720.

1721, a Sum of five hundred thousand Pounds was ask'd and granted, to make good the Deficiency of three hundred thousand Pounds. In drawing the Act of Parliament for this extraordinary Supply, a remarkable Clause to this Purpose was slipt into it — * “ Or prejudice any Pensions, or Annuities charged upon the hereditary Revenues, in Pursuance of any Act of Parliament, or by virtue of any Grants, or Letters Patents made by any former Kings, or Queens, of this Realm; which Pensions and Annuities shall be paid, but not deem'd to be Part of the SEVEN HUNDRED THOUSAND POUNDS, during his Majesty's Life.” — I appeal to every Member of that Parliament, nay even to every one of the Gentlemen of the Revenue, (who have lately taken upon Them a sort of exclusive Authority to draw and present all Money-Bills to the House) whether They remember any Motion, Leave, or Instruction, to insert this Clause; which, in the most summary Manner, at once eases the Civil-List of the annual Sum of thirty-six thousand, two hundred Pounds. This Sum, if valued at twenty five Years Purchase, amounts to above nine hundred thousand Pounds; and We may truly affirm that it is the most concise, and unprecedented Grant of Money, that was ever made in Parliament.

This short Clause would certainly admit of many Observations; but as they are not necessary to my present Purpose, I shall only wish that it may purchase so much Benefit to the People, as to engage the Guardians of their Properties to stop the passing any Money-Bills for the future, however eagerly push'd on by the Ministers, till They have had Time and Opportunity thoroughly to consider and exa-

* See an Act of the 7th of the late King, Cap. 17.

examine them; a Negligence, or Inadvertency, on these Occasions, being as unpardonable, as it is irretrievable.

From this Time, there was such a Friendship and Harmony conciliated between the House of Commons and the Ministers, and the Access to the Purse of the People was become so easy, that They found Themselves under no Necessity to think of the solemn Promise made by the Crown, to reduce the Expences of the Civil List. On the contrary, the Chancellor of the Exchequer Himself, in the Beginning of April 1725, deliver'd a second Message from his Majesty; wherein it is declared, * That the Necessities of the Government had render'd it impracticable to make any considerable Retrenchment in the Expences of the civil Government, and had engaged his Majesty in some extraordinary Expences, &c. — and therefore prayed, “ to be enabled to make use of the Funds, settled for the Payment of the Civil-List Annuities, to discharge the present Debt on the Civil List of five hundred thousand Pounds, as appeared by an Account at the same Time deliver'd to the House.

The first 500,000 l. rais'd upon this Fund is said to be without laying any new Burthen on the People; and this second Sum, being on the same Fund, is consequently supposed to be so likewise. But admitting that the Publick should not pay this Million, which I believe every Body supposes They will; yet it is certain that great Part of the Interest is now paid out of the publick Money; for supposing that the whole Civil-List of 700,000 l. paid the 6 d. per Pound, (though Part of it is well known to be exempted by the Act) This produces

B

but

* See the Votes for that Year.

(10)

but 17,500 l. per Annum; and the Remainder of the 30,000 l. per Annum must be made good by Warrants from the Treasury, directing these Deductions to be made from some of the Payments out of the Money annually granted by Parliament, for the Navy, Army, &c. or from Payments out of the Branches of the publick Revenue and Taxes, to the Diminution of the sinking Fund. This appear'd to the House, upon Enquiry, the last Parliament; a Fallacy, that was not perceived, upon the first making of the Proposition. Nor was it consider'd that this Million, having no Fund to pay the Principal, was a certain, irredeemable Debt; a Method of raising Money, which had been complain'd of, as the greatest Injury and the highest Injustice to the Nation, even in Times of the utmost Difficulty and Distress.

The next Year, when this Million was made a Lottery, and then turn'd into Annuities, it appeared that 10,000 l. of this Sum had been paid off; yet, without any Instruction to the Committee, or any Direction of the House, the Act was drawn for a full Million. The Publick was afterwards charged with the farther Sum of 19,657 l. 10 s. for the Expences of drawing the Lottery, and Losses by Tickets left in the Exchequer; so that the whole Charge of raising this Civil-List Million was above 105,000 l. which is above ten per Cent. premium, besides a Loss of one per Cent. upon 103,272 l. 10 s. in these Tickets for † Navis Debentures. — Amazing Frugality!

In the Year 1725, the Sum of 101,800 l. was taken from the sinking Fund, to make good, as the surplus Account expresses it, what was due from the hereditary and temporary Excise, in order

† See Considerations on the National Debts, &c. p. 28.

(11)

der to compleat his Majesty's Civil-List Revenue to 700,000 l. per Ann. It was pretended that this Deficiency was occasioned by several Mistakes, committed in stating the Produce of these Revenues, in the surplus Accounts, from the Year 1715 to Michaelmas 1724; and the greatest Part of it was said, to have happened in the Year 1716, but was forgot, and not discover'd, till the Year 1725. This must be allow'd to be a pretty long Retrospect into Accounts, upon which the whole Produce of the sinking Fund depends, and justly surprized many Members of the House, who then took Notice of it. Nay, They called for Accounts, to explain a Fact of this extraordinary Nature, which was judg'd to be highly improbable, considering the great Care, that might be reasonably supposed to have been taken by his Majesty's Ministers, to do Him Justice in so tender a Point as his own Revenue.

But the most material Accounts call'd-for were delay'd so long, that the usual Time of Recess, according to the modern Regulation of Parliaments, would not allow the House to proceed upon them that Session; and though, when They were laid before the House, they rather confirm'd than remov'd the Jealousies on this Head; yet no Gentleman in that Parliament can forget by what Artifices this Enquiry was baffled the next Session; and the Success of all Endeavours to examine into the most important Subjects, since that Time, will satisfy the World why it hath not been attempted since. This afterwards encourag'd the taking of 42,200 l. on the same Account, out of the Revenues of the Post-Office; but publick Necessity and publick Distress may possibly, one Time or other, bring these Facts into Examination, with some other Articles, which cannot escape the Notice of any Gentleman, who looks over the Accounts of the sinking Fund; and till this Matter is better explain'd than it is at present, the Gentlemen concern'd must not take it amiss that those two Sums, making 144,000*l.* are look'd upon as an Accession to the Civil-List.

(12)

Nor can it be certainly determin'd, without an Examination, whether the Sum of 12,575*l.* which appears by Accounts from the Post-Office to have been paid out of this Revenue for Secret-Service Money, before the Produce was paid into the Exchequer, is not a farther Addition to the Civil-List.

But This is certain; that such Methods of paying Money out of the Revenue, before it comes into the Exchequer, were always look'd upon as very unjustifiable; and, if We are to judge by the Articles of Impeachment against the Earl of Danby, are really criminal. I will add, that if it was a Crime then, it must be a much more grievous one at present, when the Surplusses of these Revenues are appropriated to the Payment of the publick Debts; for let us consider a little the different Circumstances of the Kingdom now from what it was formerly. When our Kings had only occasional Aids and Subsidies granted them for immediate Services, which soon ceased, the Collection was by few Officers, and at little Expence. As the Money was usually given to carry on Wars, undertaken by the Crown, and not in so liberal a Manner as Supplies have been lately given; the Scantiness of them engaged our Princes to keep a very watchful Eye over the Disposition of the Money; there being no long, continued Parliaments, in those Days, ready to make good all Deficiencies demanded from Them; nor was there any Occasion for Acts of Appropriation. The Necessities of the Prince were a sufficient Check, in that Case, upon the Conduct of his Ministers, and their Mismanagement seldom escaped his Resentment; for it was Himself, who felt it more than his People.
the

(13)

But the whole Frame of our Government is since changed, with Respect to the Method and Manner, as well as the great Sums of Money raised upon the People; our Necessities having rendered annual Sessions of Parliament necessary, for above forty Years past, in order to carry on two very long and expensive Wars against a Power, who threatened the Liberties of Europe. Upon this Account, the Publick cheerfully submitted to many great Difficulties and Inconveniencies; the Extent and Duration of which could not possibly be foreseen at that Time; I mean the Number and Charge of the Officers, employed in the Collection and Disposition of our Taxes, which have increased in Proportion to the Armies they were raised to support; nay, what is worse, We have been forced to submit to the former, long after We had disbanded the greatest Part of the latter, and might have disbanded more, with the utmost Safety to our present Establishment. This Multiplicity of civil Officers is not only a Burthen to the Kingdom, as they are so many unprofitable Members of the Commonwealth, and live, like Drones, on the Labour of the industrious Hive; but by the Power of favouring, or harassing the trading Part of the Kingdom, according to the Inclinations of their Superiors, They are become formidable to our Liberties, as well as infinitely vexatious and oppressive to our Fellow Subjects.

If We add to This the great Number of lucrative Employments, which, by the Misfortune of our Debts, are now in the Disposition of the Minister, and the Opportunities He hath, by these Means, to gratify gratify Persons of all Ranks and Degrees, in the Kingdom; This is such an extensive Influence, wholly unknown to our Forefathers and the Constitution, that if due Care be not taken to prevent so growing an Evil, it will be sufficient of itself to turn the Ballance of Power against the People, and leave the Nomination of our Representatives in the Hands of Men in Power.

(14)

What therefore must We think of those Persons, who were lately so very zealous for extending and enlarging such pernicious Powers?

It is well known that the Publick is liable to farther Inconveniencies on this Head; for the Produce of the Taxes, which was most solemnly appropriated to the Payment of the Principal and Interest of the national Debt, amounts to near three Millions and a half a Year; a settled Revenue, which is infinitely greater than was ever intrusted to the Care and Direction of any Treasury of this Kingdom.

But our Predecessors either thought that the publick Debts would have been paid off in a short Course of Years (as I shall presently shew they might have been) by the Improvements of the sinking Fund, with the inviolate Application of it to that Purpose; or, from a want of due Foresight into the Consequences, which attend the long Continuance of such an annual, settled Revenue, They did not use those necessary Precautions, relating to it, which the Importance of the Case required.

For the sinking Fund is at present left, without any proper Checks or Regulations, as an accidental Appendix only to the Office of the Treasury; although it is, in the most peculiar Manner, the Property of the Kingdom, not of the Crown.

As

(15)

As the greatest Part of the Taxes, which compose this Fund are mixed, in the Collection, with the Civil-List Revenues, it requires some Care, as well as Integrity, to do the Publick impartial Justice, in this Instance; for it is possible that these two Interests, though truly inseparable in themselves, may by an ill-judging and corrupt Minister be thought to clash; and then it is not difficult to determine which shall have the Preference.

It ought likewise to be considered that the Charges, attending the Management of the Revenues, are a very great Addition to the national Burthens; and yet they have been hitherto left, without any Controul, to the Wisdom, Integrity, and Discretion of Men, who may possibly exercise this unlimited Authority with a constant Regard to the Improvement of the Revenues only, and without any View to private Interest, or the Increase of that Power and Dependence, which most Ministers have formerly coveted. But since We have now a very melancholy Prospect that our present, numerous Taxes will be continued for this Generation, at least; it is to be hoped that our Representatives will think of this additional, publick Trust, and take the Care of the sinking Fund, with all the Revenues attending it, under their more immediate Inspection; that They will cause the Establishment of the Officers and their Salaries to be annually laid before Them, as other Estimates are, for their Examination and Approbation; since these Charges relate wholly to the Publick, not to the Crown; and since, in the present Method, the Treasury may assume a Power, which the Crown hath not, of laying unnecessary Burthens on the Nation, by increasing the Number, or Salaries of the Officers and other Allowances, at a Time, when our Condition requires the utmost Frugality.

I must

I must add, that the Manner of stating the Accounts of the sinking Fund, by setting down the Surplusses only of many different Duties blended together, without giving the House the distinct Produce of them, or the Payments out of them, makes these Accounts very confused and imperfect. They can, by no Means, answer the End, for which they were designed; affording as little Information, as they do Satisfaction, to the Members, who look into them for the publick Service; and all Enquiries, relating to them, are treated in such a Manner, as if these Revenues were the private Property of Those, who have the Management of them.

The Care of this great annual Revenue being an Article of as much Concern to the Publick as most Things, which can fall under the Consideration of Parliament, it certainly demands the strictest Attention of our Representatives; and if They had shewn a more early and unanimous Zeal for the due Disposition of the sinking Fund, it is possible that They might have prevented its being seiz'd for the current Service, in Times of Peace; a Mischief, which may be severely felt, when the Author of the Advice shall be no more. It may be justly said that our Representatives have been called upon by the Gentlemen of the Revenue Themselves to a more strict Discharge of this Part of their Duty; since by taking the Sums before-mentioned to make good, as They say, his late Majesty's Civil-List, They plainly confess that Mistakes have been committed in these Accounts, to the Prejudice of the Crown; and We may conclude, without any Breach of Charity, that the Publick hath not a greater Share in their Care and Concern.

Our Representatives being therefore justify'd, by this Fact, in their Apprehensions that either by Negligence, Error, or Design, They may be deprived deprived of some Part, at least, of the Benefit of this Fund; We have Reason to hope that no Length of Time will craze the Sense of the Necessity of an Enquiry into this important Affair; but that the Guardians of our Property will spare some Time in so useful a Service to Those, whom They represent; that They will take the first Opportunity to put the stating of these Accounts into such a plain and clear Method, as may make the Examination of them easy to every Gentleman, who desires to discharge his Duty; and that They will likewise direct the proper Vouchers to be annexed to them; for This is a Caution, which every Man observes in his private Affairs, and cannot be thought less necessary to the Publick. It will then appear to the World that this Article, as the Representation expresses it, is indeed the favourite Article in all Parliamentary Considerations; though at present it seems, for very good Reasons, to be the favourite Article of the Ministers only; and though I will allow the present Gentlemen in Power to be as able, as frugal, and uncorrupt, as They can desire Themselves; yet since above EIGHTY-FIVE MILLIONS have been raised upon the People, in the last twelve Years, I shall leave it to their own Determination whether it would not be much more for their Honour to desire and promote the strictest Examination into the Management and Disposition of this prodigious Sum, than any loud and repeated Defiances, with a constant Opposition at the same Time to all Attempts towards any Enquiry; for Mankind will think that such a Conduct may cover Guilt, but can never prove Innocence.

Upon the Demise of his late Majesty, the whole Produce of all the old Civil-List Funds, with the additional 120,000 l. out of the sinking Fund, was settled on his present Majesty, to make up 800,000 l. per Ann. and, by an admirable Way of Reasoning, because his late Majesty died before the usual Time of stating the Account of the sinking Fund, the Surplus of all the Civil-List Funds from the 25th of March 1727 to the 11th of June following were judged to belong to the Civil-List; though it is certain that this Surplus arises wholly from the Addition made to the Civil-List Revenues, out of the sinking Fund, by an Act pass in the first of his late Majesty's Reign, which establishes the aggregate Fund.
C was

In the * following Year, the ever-memorable Demand of 115,000 l. was made, first by Way of Deficiency, as if the Produce of the Civil-List Funds were not sufficient to make good the 800,000 l. per Ann. granted to his Majesty; but when it plainly appeared by Examination of the Officers of the Revenue at the Bar, with several Accounts called for and delivered to the House, that this Sum and more was actually standing out in Arrears, which would be soon paid into the Exchequer, the Pretence of a Deficiency was forced to be given up, and this Money was in a Manner begg'd by Way of Salvo to the Credit of Those, who first demanded it, as a just Debt. Nay, for their Honour, there is a Clause in the Act of Parliament, which grants it, attesting this Truth, by enacting that 115,000 l. shall be repaid out of any Arrears of the Civil-List, at his Majesty's Demise; and if We may believe a † little Pamphlet, which fully explains this Matter, and was never answer'd, there was so far from being any Deficiency, * 1728. † A Letter from a Member of Parliament to a Friend in the Country, concerning the Sum of 115,000 l. granted for the Service of the CIVIL LIST. Printed in the Year 1729.

ency, that the Civil-List received, at least, a MILLION that Year.

The farther additional Grants to the Civil List, under the Name of Votes of Credit, are as follows.

In the Year 1726, upon another Message from his Majesty, of a very extraordinary Nature, (as the Protests of the Lords set forth at large) there was an unprecedented Grant of Money, without the Limitation of any Sum, said to be for securing the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, and preserving the Peace of Europe; on which Account there was taken out of the annual Supplies the Sum of 175,000 l. over and above 75,000 l. on Account of the Treaty with the Landgrave of Hesse Cassel.

Messages from the Crown, upon these Occasions, having given some Trouble to the Ministers, a new Artifice was put in Practice the next Year, by ordering the Secretary of the Treasury to make a Motion, in the Committee upon the Malt Bill, for a Clause to empower his Majesty to apply such Sums as should be necessary for defraying the like Expences, in securing our Trade and Navigation, and preserving the Peace of Europe. By Virtue of this Clause, the Sum of 250,000 l. was taken for these Services, besides 50,000 l. more for the King of Sweden, upon his Accession to the Treaty of Hannover.

In the Year 1728, upon another Message from the Crown, the Sum of 60,000 l. was given on the same Account, for securing our Trade, &c.

The Sum of 93,940 l. of the late Queen's Civil List Lottery, which remain'd unsubscribed to the South-Sea Company, being intirely paid off in the Year 1728, by the 35,000 l. per annum appropriated for this Service; and there being an annual Sum of 16,400 l. then remaining, more than what answered the bare Interest of that Part of the Lottery, which was subscribed into the South-Sea Company; this annual Sum of 16,400 l. was judged to belong to the Civil List, according to the usual Way of reasoning upon these Occasions, and hath been accordingly taken; though by the Act of the 6th of his late Majesty, the whole 35,000 l. is appropriated for ever, with the other Branches of the sinking Fund, towards the Payment of the national Debt.

It would be endless to enter into many other particular Assistances received by the Civil List; as the Grants of Falls of Wood, &c. an Account of which from the Year 1715 to June 1727 was moved for by an Address, in the Year 1728, but had a Negative put upon it; though it was represented that great Wastes had been made in the Royal Forests at a Time, when the Nation was in the utmost Want of Timber, to supply and support the Navy.

That some of these Grants were not very justifiable, seemed to be allow'd by a Gentleman in great Power, who observed that this Enquiry might be injurious to some, who are dead, but would be unprofitable to the living. But I must beg Leave to ask Him, whether preventing the like for the Time to come would be of no Service to the Publick.

Few Persons will be surprized at the frequent Necessities of the Civil List, notwithstanding that ample Revenue, which was settled on his late Majesty, when They remember that no less a Sum than * ONE MILLION, three hundred thirty six thousand, three hundred Pounds, was paid in four Years, from March 1721 to March 1725, for Pensions, Bounties and secret Service Money; which is annually above half the Civil-List Revenues; and if such Measures were to continue, the Gentleman, who wrote the short History of the Parliament in 1713, may live to see his own Prophecy fulfilled; that a LAND, OR MALT TAX, must at last be made an hereditary Revenue for the Support of the Honour and Dignity of the Crown. Yet it is evident that Prince, People, and Ministers Themselves will be all Sufferers by such Profusions; for it is very well observed in a little Pamphlet, written by the late Mr. Trenchard, that * "As the Crown never was, so it is ridiculous to believe it ever will be better for such irregular Supplies. The Demands upon it will rise in exact Proportion to their fancied Riches, and the WEAKNESS OF THE MINISTRY. Every one will think He hath a Right to share in the Profit, who had a Share in the Guilt; and endless Importunities must distract the Court, as well as exhaust the Nation. Whereas a general good Husbandry will soon put an End to all wild, and impertinent Sollicitations. No one will pretend to what no one hath. Worthless Men will not spend their Substance, in Hopes to repair themselves out of the Kingdom's Ruins; but the Direction of the publick Affairs will fall naturally into Hands, who have no Interest but in the publick Happiness.

* See Considerations on the National Debt, &c.

His late Majesty's Frugality in the Management of his German Revenues, as well as his great Tenderness in taxing his Subjects, who were born under his absolute Authority, are very well known all over Europe. I doubt not therefore but the Reader will be as fully convinced as I am, that nothing but but the most rapacious Importunities, or the wickedest Misrepresentations, could have engaged his Majesty to make such repeated Demands from his British Subjects, when He was so well acquainted with the heavy Load of Debt, under which They laboured, and so often recommended their Relief to Parliament, in the most tender and compassionate Manner.

* See some Considerations on the State of our publick Debts in general, and of the Civil List in particular. — Printed for Peete in the Year 1720, or 1741.

The dangerous Consequences of granting Money, by Votes of Credit, without any Limitation of the Sum, or Specification of the Services to be performed, have been partly shewn in Politicks on both Sides; but a Point of such Importance requires some farther Animadversion, which I will reserve for the latter Part of this Essay.

I shall therefore proceed to an Account of the annual Supplies rais'd since the Year 1721; in which I shall include the Votes of Credit before-mentioned, with the foreign Subsidies to the King of Sweden, Duke of Wolfenbuttle, King of Denmark, and the Pay of an Army of 12000 Hessians for five Years.

	l.	s.	d.
In 1722 ———	2,554,762	15	04
In 1723 ———	1,769,279	16	02
In 1724 ———	1,748,122	05	02
In 1725 ———	1,727,344	09	03
In 1726 ———	1,939,285	17	07
In 1727 ———	2,980,801	15	04
In 1728 ———	3,123,449	15	06
In 1729 ———	3,087,859	04	02
In 1730 ———	2,166,400	00	09
In 1731 ———	2,060,232	09	04
In 1732 ———	1,743,359	01	10
In 1733 ———	1,835,056	00	06
Total —	26,735,953	10	02

These

These Articles amount to TWENTY SIX MILLIONS, seven hundred thirty five thousand, nine hundred and fifty three Pounds.

It is well known that the Prosperity of Nations depends on the Pursuit of the same wise and frugal Measures, by which private Families thrive and flourish; for the Revenues of Kingdoms have their Bounds, as well as the smallest Estates. It is therefore necessary that both should frequently examine their Expences, and reflect upon the Consequences of them.

In order to assist the Reader to do This, upon the present Occasion, I shall take Notice that the foregoing Sum amounts to TWO MILLIONS, two hundred twenty seven thousand, nine hundred Pounds per Ann. during the last twelve Years of uninterrupted Peace.

If We add to this Sum the annual Interest of the publick Debt, with the sinking Fund, (which may be estimated at about THREE MILLIONS and an HALF;) together with the present Civil-List, making good the Deficiencies of old Funds, Interest of the annual Grants in Parliament, and the Charges of Collection and Management of all the numerous Duties and Taxes, which raise these Revenues, since the Year 1721, I believe it will be found not to be less than SEVEN MILLIONS a Year.

This being a Subject, that requires the most serious Reflection of Those, who have any Concern for their Country; and as They may be more easily induced to reflect on the Consequences of such Measures by Reasonings, which are not liable to the Objection of being influenced by any of the Prejudices, or Passions, of the present Times; I shall give my Reader the Opinion of Dr. D'avenant; who, in his Essay on the probable Means of making making a People Gainers, says, * “ that when “ this Kingdom shall be arrived at that Period of “ ill Conduct, as to pay constantly FIVE or SIX “ MILLIONS per Ann. We may venture to pro“ nounce that the common People of England will

 “ in all Circumstances be then as poor and mise“ rable, as the common People of France were “ before the War; and We desire all good Pa- “ *triot*s to carry this Reflection in their Minds.

A very able Mathematician hath told us since that, according to his Calculation, if ever Great Britain raises above FIVE MILLIONS in a Year, the Kingdom would be exhausted and ruined in a few Years.

I shall not take upon me to determine how just these Computations may be; but I believe every Gentleman, who hath lived any Time in the Country, must have seen some of the melancholy Effects of these vast Sums raised on the People; and if We had not been lately favoured with an extraordinary Demand for Corn from abroad, (a Relief that We are not always to depend upon) the Gentlemen of England would have severely felt the farther Consequences of them.

It cannot be forgot that reducing the annual Expences of the Government much lower than they had been in former Reigns, upon the Conclusion of the last War, was the sincere Desire and Intention of every true Lover of his Country at that Time, and very flattering Schemes were published upon it. But I believe few Things have been more grievous to Them than the miserable Disappointment of their Hopes and Expectations in this Particular; at least to Those, who have lived to see the common Expences of the Year increas'd to such a Degree,

* Pag. 175. first Edition.

gree, that they may be truly said to have become insupportable to the Kingdom. Of This We cannot have a more melancholy Proof, than that We are reduced to the Necessity of mortgaging the Funds, appropriated to the Payment of our old Debts, to defray these Charges; many of which, as I have fully shewn in the * former Part, have been brought upon us by vain Surmises of imaginary Dangers, that Time hath shew'd had no Reality; and therefore Mankind will be apt to think that they were raised and propagated with some other Views, besides the Care of our Safety and Preservation only.

It hath been observed before, that all Endeavours to obtain a sufficient and proper Authority to examine the publick Accounts, have been constantly opposed and defeated; though it must be allow'd that it never was more necessary, than when such Sums have been annually raised on the Nation, in Time of Peace, as would some few Years ago have exceeded all Belief.

It cannot be expected that a private Man should enter into all the Particulars on this Head; but whoever takes Notice of the common Papers only, which are laid before Parliament, and at present are not deny'd Them, must immediately see, from these imperfect Lights, that there hath been Room for some Savings, even since that frugal Æra of the Year 1721.

Though I can truly assure the Reader that I have no Pleasure in exposing the Calamities of my Country; yet I hope the Importance of the Occasion will excuse my hinting at some few Instances, with no other View than to excite the Zeal of Those, who may hereafter have it in their Power to ease the Nation, by putting a Stop to all unnecessary Expences; and to convince Them that, in our present Condition, the smallest is not inconsiderable.

D of

* Politicks on both Sides.

If We look into the Papers, concerning the Navy, We shall find the same Practice, of which a worthy Patriot complain'd, with Relation to the Army, in the Year 1718. New Captains, Masters of Ships, and Lieutenants are made at home, whilst Numbers fit for Service are kept on Half-pay. Officers have been advanc'd to higher Posts, and enter'd on board for a very short Time, in order to receive greater Half-pay only; a Charge on the Kingdom, both for Sea and Land-Service, that was formerly very small, when compared to what it hath cost the Nation in later Times.

There may not, perhaps, be many Instances of this Kind at present; but it is an Abuse, which, like all others, will increase, if not timely prevented.

The Article of Contingencies, in most Offices, is greatly increas'd beyond what it ever was formerly, in Times of Peace, and seems to be under no Regulation, or Restraint; though it amounts to near 77,000 l. in three Offices, since the Year 1720. There is one Article, in this Account, which I believe the Modesty of the Gentlemen concern'd would have scarce allow'd Them to ask of Parliament, though the Payment of it does not seem very justifiable without such an Authority; I mean the Sum of above 23,000 l. repaid to the Officers of the Navy and VICTUALLING, for the LAND-TAX of their Salaries. Country Gentlemen may possibly think that the principal Officers, at least, are as well able to pay this Tax for their

PLACES,

PLACES, as They, who have none; and though I know it is alledg'd that This is a Practice of long standing, it is neither more reasonable, nor justifiable, on that Account; for if such Allowances are really proper, it would be much better to exempt these Officers by a Clause in the Land Tax Bill, than to suffer any inferior Authority to repeal an Act of the Legislature, as this Practice does, so far as it extends; since the Money is repaid out of the Grants in Parliament.

Another Instance, which I shall mention, must be allowed to be very extraordinary; I mean the new Buildings and Repairs, belonging to the Admiralty, Navy, and victualling Offices; which, since December 1720, amount to above two hundred sixty two thousand Pounds. No Estimate of these great Expences was ever laid before the Parliament, nor any Demand made for such Services; but they were carried on, when this Branch of the publick Service was near two MILLIONS in Debt, for the greatest Part of which the Nation pays 5 l. per Cent.

I do not take upon me to judge of the Reasonableness, or immediate Necessity of these fine Edifices; but I believe every Subject, who must pay towards them, will think it was very fit that the Parliament should have been acquainted with them, before they were undertaken; that They might have had the Choice, at least, whether They would have rais'd the Money, or paid 5 l. per Cent. for it, and not have had such an Addition to the Navy Debt, in a Manner, stolen upon them, under the Head of Wear and Tear; for the Interest on Navy and victualling Bills, to the 31st of December last, with these Buildings, amounts to above 630,000 l. of the present Debt.

Part of this Sum is a very new and extraordinary Expence, as little known as it was wanted in former Times, under the Name of a NAVAL ACADEMY. Such an Establishment may, perhaps, be useful in France and other Popish Countries, where all Learning is confin'd to the Clergy and their Colleges; but This is not our Case in England; for there is scarcely a Street in London, or a Seaport Town in the Country, where Youth may not be taught the Theory of Navigation, as it hath been hitherto practis'd, without any Charge to the Nation. I believe, it may be aded that our Fleet hath been carried to the highest Pitch of Reputation, which it will ever see, without any such Establishment at the publick Expence.

It is therefore to be hoped that when this new Project (which hath already cost the Nation between nine and ten thousand Pounds) is better considered, the Building may be turn'd to some other Use, before it brings a farther annual Charge upon us, and becomes an Hospital of Pensioners to the Favourites and Dependents of the PROJECTORS.

These and some other Observations, which naturally arise from the Accounts delivered, on this Occasion, ought to make us wish that a Committee had been appointed more early in the Session, as was earnestly desired, before the greatest Part of the Money for the Payment of the Navy Debt was voted; since it is certain, as the House was then informed, that appointing it so late in the Year would slacken the Zeal and Diligence of many Gentlemen, who might have otherwise attended the Committee. Besides, it was very evident that there was not Time enough left to enter into such a particular Enquiry, as was necessary to give the House any useful Information on a Subject of this Importance. But if a Committee had been granted granted sooner, We might possibly have received some Satisfaction, with Regard to the present naval Stores, and been able to have compared it with the last Estimate, that was made of them. This would have shewn the House whether the Condition of the Nation, in this Particular, is better or worse than it was before contracting the present great Debt. — But giving Money seems to be the only Privilege left to Parliament; and no Time hath been thought proper or convenient, for many Years past, to enquire into the Disposition of it.

If We turn to the Provisions for the Army, We shall find extraordinary Expences, of the same Kind, growing upon the Publick.

The single Article of Garrisons is, by a gradual Increase, brought to above 6000 l. per Ann. more than it was in the Year 1720, and from 29,800 l. a Year, is now above 35,800 l. a Year, which is one fifth Part of the whole Expence.

In the four Years, from 1721 to 1725, there is 4000 l. paid, by Way of Secret-Service Money, for securing the Peace of the Highlands in North Britain; and, in the Year 1725, We were put to an Expence of 2500 l. more for disarming the Highlands.

In 1726 the Sum of 7000 l. was paid for repairing Fortifications, building Barracks, &c. in Scotland; and since that Time, by an annual Expence increasing most Years, there hath been paid 22,000 l. for repairing and making new Roads, in that Part of the Kingdom. — It is not possible for Persons at a Distance to judge of the Usefulness of this Work; but it is to be wish'd that it had been carried on, like the Roman Works of the same Kind, by the Forces there, without so great a Charge to the Nation.

Howe

However, it would be some Satisfaction to the Publick, if They had only a Prospect of being Gainers by these extraordinary Expences, from any future Saving; but, on the contrary, the publick Charge hath increased, in those Parts, from this very Time; for it is well known that, soon after the late Rebellion, the three Highland, independent Companies were broke at the unanimous Request of the Nobility and Gentlemen of North Britain; it being represented that They were too often employed by the Heads of the Clans, who got the Command of them, by Turns, to execute private Grudges and Revenges on one another, to the great Disturbance of the Peace and Quiet of that Country.

The Pay of these Companies, before the Rebellion, was 2,847l. per Annum; but, in the Year 1726, six Companies of these Forces, which had been before represented as Nuisances, were new-raised at 5,721l. per Annum; and This increasing, as most other publick Expences do, like Hydra's Heads, They were augmented, two Years afterwards, and their Pay now amounts to 9,100l. per Annum.

These few Instances of additional Expences in North Britain only, with some farther Additions to the Pay of the Officers of the Garrisons there, have already cost the Nation above 110,000l; a Sum, that is near the Produce of their Land-Tax, for ten Years, when it is one Shilling in the Pound; and how long they are to be continued, must be left to the Wisdom of Parliament.

It would be tedious to pursue every Instance of this Kind. I shall therefore conclude with a new Expence or two, which are in their Beginning only; That is, about 7000 l. lately paid for victualling Forces at JAMAICA, and for Flesh-meat for the Regiments giments at MINORCA. It is well known that the Regiment at Jamaica was maintain'd, in the last War, without this Charge; and that the Forces at Minorca have hitherto subsisted, without any such Allowance. But if these Expences are continued, They will very probably increase, as all others have done, to a much greater Sum.

Yet This is not the chief Consideration, with Regard to many of the Expences before-mentioned; for most of them have been made without any Estimate, or Demand in Parliament; and Those, relating to the Army, have been brought into an Account of Services unprovided for, after They have been performed.

Such Demands may be necessary and unavoidable, in Time of War; but are not so, in Time of Peace; especially when a large Sum for Contingencies is annually allowed, sufficient to answer all reasonable Expences on this Head, if strictly apply'd; and the Officers, who are intrusted with the Distribution only of the publick Money, should not take upon Them to make new Expences, unless immediate Necessity requires it, without the Consent of Parliament; for it is, in Effect, raising Money without the Authority of Parliament; and though these Things may be thought of but little Consequence in the Beginning, They may be increased to an Extravagance, which will not only be very burthensome to the Kingdom, but encourage the Introduction of very bad and mischievous Precedents, which multiply too fast upon us. Our Representatives ought therefore to put an immediate Stop to them, by referring all future Demands and Estimates to a Committee, in order to be compared with former Establishments, that the Differences may be particularly stated and reported to the House for their Approbation; nothing being more more certain than that the Circumstances of the Kingdom require the most rigorous Frugality.

(32)

That the Reader may be able to make some Judgment of the Savings, which might have been made by such a Conduct, during the last twelve Years, it will be proper to consider the Services and Expences, which were formerly thought necessary, in Time of Peace. Now Those, who made the largest Allowance, never thought of maintaining an Army of above ten thousand Landmen, and a Fleet of about five thousand Seamen. These, with the Ordinary of the Navy, the Ordnance, the Forces at Gibraltar, Minorca, and the Plantations, Half-pay, and some other small Articles, include all the publick Expences.

Whoever will give Himself the Trouble to collect and compare the several Estimates on these Heads, which have been deliver'd into Parliament, since the Union, will find that about 1,025,900 l. per Ann. will support all these Services, if We only add to it a little of that frugal Management, in correcting the Estimates, and reforming Abuses, which was most strenuously pleaded for by a worthy Patriot, in the Year 1718. This Sum, for twelve Years, amounts to 12,310,800 l. from whence it appears that the extraordinary Expences, in these twelve Years, amount to above FOURTEEN MILLIONS, four hundred thousand Pounds; which is a greater Sum than hath been raised upon LAND within the same Time; and every Man, who hath any real Concern for the landed Interest, must heartily wish that this Expence had been saved to the Country Gentlemen.

It hath been already observed, in Politicks on both Sides, and Time hath shewn, that the Nation would have been as safe, and our Trade and Navigation in as flourishing a Condition, if this Money had had not been raised. — I must add that our Allies, who were equally engaged with us, put Themselves to little or no Expence, on this Account, but wisely enjoyed the Fruits of Peace, in improving and recovering their Finances, whilst ours were stretched to their utmost Extent.

(33)

To This We must likewise add another grievous Consideration; that many Millions of these extraordinary Expences have been defray'd out of that sacred Treasure, which was once thought inviolably appropriated to the Payment of the national Debt.

It is certain that the Reduction of this Debt hath been recommended, in the most earnest and pathetick Manner, to the House of Commons, in almost every Speech from the Throne, for twenty Years past, as a Point, which deserved their chief Attention, and was of the utmost Consequence to the Welfare of the Kingdom.

The Commons have likewise, in as many Addresses, given the strongest Assurances of their fix'd Intentions carefully to improve, and religiously to apply the Produce of the sinking Fund to this wise and good End; particularly in the late famous REPRESENTATION, which declares in the most solemn Manner to his Majesty and the whole Kingdom, " That as the NATIONAL DEBT was a Matter of " the last Consequence to the Nation, it became " the Care and Concern of All, who wish'd well to
" our present and future Prosperity; and the SINK-" ING FUND consequently became immediately
" the favourite Article in all Parliamentary Consi" derations, relating to the publick Revenues, and " was considered as a national Interest, worthy of " the highest Regard and Attention, which was by
" all possible Means to be cherished and improved,
" and the Produce of it set apart and kept distinct " from all other Services and Purposes, and was " appropriated by Parliament to pay off and dis-
E. charge

“ charge national Debts BEFORE the 25th Day of “ December 1716.

The Speeches from the Throne, at the Conclusion of every Session, have also been full of Thanks and Congratulations with the Commons, on the great Progress They have made in this good Work.

I believe most Persons, who have read these Recommendations, Assurances, and Congratulations, are apt to conclude that many great Additions must have been made to the sinking Fund, and a very great Diminution of the national Debt; but They will be very much disappointed, when They look into the present State of these Matters.

To save Gentlemen some Trouble, on this Occasion, I shall give Them an Abstract of the several Sums, which have been taken from the sinking Fund, since the Year 1721, and are as follows.

	per Annum.
Annual Pensions , granted by his Majesty's Predecessors — — — } l.	36,200
To compleat his present Majesty's Civil List to 800,000 l. a Year. — } 100,000
Produce of the Coal Duty , for rai- sing 1,750,000 l. for the Service of the Year 1728 — — — } 70,000
Surplus of the Lottery Funds 1714, for raising 1,250,000 l. for the Service of the Year 1729 — } 50,000
East-India Fund , for raising } 1,200,000 l. for the Service of 1730. } 38,000
Salt Duty , for the Service of } 1732 — — — — — } 185,000
The Remainder of her late Maje- sty's Civil List Lottery in the Year } 1713 — — — — — } 16,400
Total per Annum — — —	495,600

This

This annual Sum valued, according to the Representation, at 25 Years Purchase, amounts to TWELVE MILLIONS, three hundred and ninety thousand Pounds.

The following Sums, which are not annual,
have likewise been taken, at different Times, from the sinking Fund.

Towards Payment of the Navy Debts , in 1722 contracted since } l.	290,900
1716 — — — — — } Given the South-Sea Company in } 1723 — — — — — } 2,000,000
To compleat his late Majesty's Civil List to 700,000 l. per Annum , } as before-mentioned — — — } 144,000

It appears by a Resolution of the House of Commons in March 1727, that by a most unheard-of Negligence, the whole Revenue of Hawkers and Pedlars was lost, and never miss'd either by the Officers of the Treasury, or Exchequer; a remarkable Proof of their great Care in the Management of the vast Revenue, with which They are intrusted
by the Publick! — — — } 36,600

Given for the Service of the Year } 1733 — — — — — } 500,000
Total — — —	2,971,500

Some Persons may object, at first, to the Two MILLIONS in this Account, given to the South Sea Company; but when They consider that the publick Distresses were sufficiently reliev'd, and the publick Clamour sufficiently appeas'd by the Remission of FIVE MILLIONS in 1721, They will certainly agree that this Sum of TWO MILLIONS

E 2

was

was a Bounty granted, by Way of Composition, for their giving up the BANK CONTRACT; and I believe every Body is now convinc'd that this Money would have been much better saved to the Nation, than dissipated, as it hath been, by their Directors, without any Benefit to the poor Proprietors. Nay, perhaps, it might lay the Foundation of that loose and corrupt Management, by which the publick Creditors have been such great Sufferers, without any due Animadversion on the Authors of it.

The Remission of these Two MILLIONS will appear the more unreasonable, when We consider that they would have reimburs'd the Publick, before this Time, the Sum of THREE MILLIONS, one hundred and twenty three thousand Pounds, allowed the Proprietors of the long Annuities, upon their Subscription to the South Sea Company.

But Objections of this Kind are meer Peccadilloes, in Comparison with the subsequent Conduct of Those, who lately claim'd so much Merit from their pretended Establishment of the sinking Fund, and for some Time express'd a Zeal for the religious Application of it to the Payment of the national Debt before 1716. It is therefore difficult to account for their sudden Change of Opinion, or by what Reasonings the Legislature have been induc'd to concur in Measures, which to common Understandings seem contrary to the Purport of several particular Acts of Parliament, that appear in almost every Page of our Statute Book, from the Revolution to this Time; for it ought to be remember'd that the Loans, which constitute the present national Debt, were originally made to the Publick upon the Faith of these Acts, and the Payment of them (as I have before observed) was lately the favourite Concern both of Prince and Parliament.

In this very remarkable Variation of Measures, We see some of the Consequences of running into Expences, which exceed the Ability of the Kingdom to support; for the Supplies being once voted, it is natural for a People, burthen'd with Taxes, to listen to any Expedients for present Ease, though they may entail certain Ruin on Themselves, as well as their Posterity; and This, like the great Change it presages in our Constitution, hath been brought about by Degrees.

The Surplus only of the Coal Tax was the first of the Duties, which, being made perpetual by the famous South Sea Act, of the 6th of the late King, for the Payment of the national Debt before 1716, was in the Year 1727 distinguished from being any Part of the sinking Fund, and taken for the current Service of that Year.

The Parliament having given Way to This, upon a nominal Payment, as to the Publick, of the Sum of 434,605 l. (the Debt on this Fund, that was subscribed to the South Sea Company) the whole Produce of this Tax was taken the next Year to raise ONE MILLION, seven hundred and fifty thousand Pounds, which may be truly called an irredeemable Debt; since it appears by the Estimate of the Produce of this Tax, delivered into Parliament, that it is not sufficient to pay the Interest of this new Debt at 4 l. per Cent.

As Precedents generally improve upon one another, so in the Year 1729 the whole Surplus of the Lottery 1714, above what was sufficient to pay the bare Interest only of the Sum subscribed to the South-Sea Company, was taken for the Service of that Year, and created another irredeemable Debt of ONE MILLION, two hundred and fifty thousand Pounds.

This

(38)

This Fund was different from the Coal Duty in one Respect; for by the Act of the 12th of the late Queen, on which the Creditors lent their Money, there was a provisional Surplus to repay the Principal and Interest in 32 Years; which annual Surplus (the Lottery not filling) was increased and reinforced by an Act imo Geo. for rectifying Mistakes in the Names of the Commissioners of the Land Tax. This Surplus is contain'd in the Sum taken from this Fund, for the Service of the Year. The whole Fund likewise, as well as the former, is made perpetual by the before-mentioned Act of the 6th of the late King, for Payment of the national Debt, contracted before 1716.

Upon the short Relief given to the poor Manufacturers and Labourers; by the supposed Abolition of the Salt Duty in 1730, another Advantage was taken of the like Nature; for though the Salt Tax was only one of the Funds appropriated to the Payment of the East-India Company, (the other being Part of the Stamp Duties) yet by the never-failing Dexterity of a certain Gentleman, on these Occasions, the Payment of all the annual Interest to the said Company was from thence-forwards directed to be made out of the sinking Fund; by which Means, together with the Reduction of the Company's Interest, a new Fund was gained of about 42,000 l. per An. and upon the Credit of it a new irredeemable Debt of ONE MILLION two hundred thousand Pounds was raised, for the Service of the Year 1731.

In the Year 1732, the Salt Tax was revived, to the great Concern of the whole Kingdom, and mortgaged for three Years, to raise five hundred thousand Pounds, for the Service of that Year. I shall not say, as some do, that the View in taking off this Duty was in order to detach it from the sinking Fund; but it must be allowed to be a very

(39)

very dangerous and extensive Precedent, which seems to threaten all the Securities of the publick Creditors; for this Tax now contributes nothing towards the Payment of the Debt, for which it was first imposed; and though the first Sum was not paid off at Christmas last, it is this Year mortgaged for ONE MILLION more.

All Difficulties, on this Head, being now got over, it was no longer thought necessary to proceed by the Way of distinguishing particular Branches of the Fund out of it; but a Sum of five hundred thousand Pounds was taken at once, for the Service of the Year 1733, out of the Produce of the sinking Fund; and, that I may conclude with it, the twelve hundred thousand Pounds to be taken out of it, for the Service of this Year, will probably be an Anticipation of the Produce of this Fund; for the last Year's Produce to Michaelmas not being sufficient to pay the Million, which was ordered to be apply'd towards the Discharge of the South-Sea Company, that Debt was not paid off till Christmas; and in Case the Deficiencies on the general Fund, Part of the sinking Fund, should continue to be push'd forwards, as they have been for three Years past, this Sum may be longer in paying.

That the Reader may the better understand This, it is proper to take Notice that these Deficiencies have been voted every Year out of the Money given to make good the Deficiencies of the annual Grants; but the Land and Malt Tax, by an idle Deception of our selves, being given for more Money than it is known they will raise, This will always make a a Deficiency of the Grants; and, under that Pretence, the Payment of the Deficiencies on the general Fund have been postponed, as above, not without some little Loss to the Publick, by paying Interest for above 80,000 l. Part of the

Million

Million before-mentioned, for one Quarter to Christmas; though, by the Confession of an honourable Gentleman, there was at the same Time Money issued to the publick Offices, which could not be used till long after that Time.

It must be added, that the Application of any Part of the sinking Fund to the Services of the Year is a particular Hardship to the People of England; because Scotland pays little or nothing towards this Fund, and consequently the Burthen falls very unequally upon Us; though, in great Tenderness to that Part of the united Kingdom,
We have already exempted Them from the Salt Tax.

In Truth, the common Use of the Words sinking Fund, like several other technical Terms, hath made the true Meaning of them a Mystry to many Readers; and Gentlemen have talk'd very wildly upon this Subject in Places, where They ought to be a little better inform'd; as if the *publick
Creditors* had no Right to this Fund; that no Money was borrowed upon it; and that the Taxes, appropriated to the Payment of their Interest, are very different from these Funds; whereas, in Truth, they are the very same individual Taxes, engaged by Parliament for the Payment of their Interest and Principal.

To This We may add a late comfortable Doctrine, that the national Debt is turn'd into a perpetual Annuity; which supposes the present Age to be capable of committing the highest Act of Injustice and Cruelty to Posterity, by laying an everlasting Load on the Kingdom.

These and some other absurd Notions, inconsistent with common Sense and common Honesty, having been lately propagated to serve a particular Turn, it is necessary to make the Nature of the sinking sinking Fund a little more intelligible to every Reader.

The present Creditors of the Publick, whose Properties constitute the national Debt, lent their Money at diverse Times upon the Faith of particular Acts of Parliament, which imposed several Taxes for the Repayment of their Principal and Interest; such as Soap, Candles, Stamp Duties, Excise, Subsidies, &c. Every Lender had one or more Order and Tally, payable at the Exchequer
in Course, as they were number'd, out of the Produce of these Taxes; some of which were to continue till the Money borrowed upon them was repaid; and in some Cases, as in most of the Lotteries, there was what We now call a sinking Fund included in the Act of Parliament it self, by the Computation of an annual Sum, sufficient to pay the Principal and Interest of the Money borrowed in a certain Time. In such Cases, the Parliament always bound Themselfes by the strongest Clauses, inserted in the Act, to make good any Deficiencies of these annual Sums out of the next Aids in Parliament, that the Creditor might, in all Events, be secure of his Repayment; and the Money, as it came into the Exchequer, was reserved there till the Creditor call'd for it; all the Officers of the Exchequer being subject to the severest Penalties, in Case of any Misapplication.

The great Advantages of this Method to the Publick, as well as the Creditor, must be immediately seen. Every 500 l. or less Sum, being set off for Payment, as it came into the Exchequer, the Interest then ceas'd; nor was a Million of Money paid off at once, and sent to Market for the Advantage of Stockjobbers, and to the Loss of the poor Creditor, as it is at present; but He could judge beforehand about what Time He should receive

ceive his Money, which enabled Him to make Provision for putting it out again to Interest, in the same Manner as Persons now do, who lend their Money on the Land Tax; for there is no Difference between These and the Others, but in the Time of the Repayment of their Money.

This was formerly the Case of all the publick Creditors, except the Annuitants, whose Principal was to be sunk at the End of a certain Term of Years; and though They were deluded with the Hopes of great imaginary Advantages to subscribe their Debts into the South Sea Company, upon the Credit of that famous Act, which may be call'd the great Charter of national Faith between the Publick and their Creditors; yet I can answer for my self and many others, that We were very far from intending, by that Subscription, to give up, or in the least to weaken, the Right We had to our Securities, by virtue of those particular Acts of Parliament, on the Credit of which We originally lent our Money. On the contrary, We had Reason to hope that our Properties would receive a new Security by this Incorporation, according to the common Maxim, vis unita fortior; nay, in Order to give the Creditors this Satisfaction, the several Acts of Parliament, on which their Debts are founded, are recited in the South-Sea Act and made perpetual, to render their Repayment more certain. The whole Produce of all the Taxes so mentioned is plainly appropriated to its former Uses, the Payment of the national Debt, contracted before Christmas 1716, and to no other Use whatsoever; as appears by the whole Tenour of the Act, and many express Clauses in it.

The Surplus of these Taxes, after the Interest of the Debt is paid, constitutes the sinking Fund, which is commonly distinguished under three Heads, the Aggregate, Aggregate, the South-Sea and the General Fund, with some Additions, which it receives from the Act of the 7th of the late Queen, for enlarging the Capital of the Bank, and the 12th of the same Reign, for raising 1,200,000 l. for publick Uses, &c. These last Acts are reinforced, and some few Duties more added to the Fund, by the Act of the 1st of his late Majesty, which establishes the aggregate Fund.

But it is well known that the great Increase of the sinking Fund arises from the Creditors consenting to a Reduction of their Interest, at different Times, from 6 to 4 per Cent.

This being the Case, no Man surely will deny that the publick Creditors, either in the Bank, or South-Sea Company, have the same Right to their Securities, in their collective Capacity, as They had singly, when every Man had the Title to his Mortgage on any of the Taxes, by an Order and Talley, in his own Possession; as the Creditors on the Land-Tax now have. I believe nobody thinks that it would be for the publick Utility to apply all the Money, more than what is sufficient to pay the Interest on these Loans, to any other Use.

When We read, in Acts of Parliament, that any Surplusses are reserved for the Disposition of Parliament, the Meaning is Surplusses after the Principal and Interest of the Debt are paid, or any Surplus exceeding the annual Sum appropriated by Parliament for the Payment of the Sum borrowed in any certain Number of Years, as before-mentioned. The like Clause in any Act of Parliament, since the Subscription of the publick Debt to the South Sea Company, can have no other Meaning, or Intention, than to give the Parliament a Power of applying the sinking Fund to the Payment of any of the national Debts, contracted before 1716, which They shall judge most proper and convenient.

But let us suppose that, in drawing an Act of such Length and Variety as the South-Sea Act, there should be any doubtful Expressions, which may by corrupt and litigious Lawyers be construed to the Disadvantage of the publick Creditors; They must, in this Case, rely on the Honour and Justice of Parliament, whose Protection They have merited, in an especial Manner, by subscribing their Estates, for the Benefit of the Publick, in order to promote the more speedy Payment of the national Debt. It is not therefore to be presumed that the Legislature will countenance any Insinuations, as if the publick Creditors had now a less Security than They had formerly for the Repayment of their Principal; since such Doctrines strike at the Foundation of national Credit, Faith and Justice, on the Basis of which all Property stands, and no Part of it can be shaken without putting the whole in Danger.

Most of the publick Creditors have already too severely felt the Mischiefs of trusting the Direction of their Properties to Companies; by whose Management They have been such Sufferers (particularly many Widows and Orphans, whose Case is very deplorable) that They deserve the Compassion of the Publick, rather than any farther Hardships; and it is well known that Multitudes of Proprietors in these Companies are often forced, by a Majority artfully obtain'd, to submit to the Disposition of their Properties in a Manner They do not approve; some late Instances of which are very grievous to All, who make any Reflections on publick Credit.

But

But the Interest of the whole Nation, in the speedy Payment of the present Debt, is a farther Security to the publick Creditors; for This is the only Method of delivering ourselves from those heavy and grievous Taxes We now labour under, which inance the Price of all the Necessaries of Life, and endanger the Loss of many beneficial Branches of Trade, by disabling our Manufacturers to work as cheap as other Nations. Besides, a long Continuance of them may tempt some bold and ambitious Prince, who may hereafter arise, to seize so great and tempting a Revenue, already settled and collected by Law; which would make the Liberties of the Kingdom an easy Prey. No Lover of his Country can therefore be too earnest in his Desires to see the Abolition of them; nor can any Man deserve better than by a Zeal and Firmness in pursuing this true Interest of the Publick.

It is Encouragement enough for Gentlemen to do This, when They consider that every Sum, apply'd to the Payment of the publick Debt, contributes something to their Relief. Let us suppose, for Instance, a Million paid off. This Sum is not only a Gain to the Nation of forty thousand Pounds a Year; but it is daily increasing by compound Interest. Whereas, when the same Sum is otherwise apply'd, it creates a new Debt of forty thousand Pounds a Year.

I know the common Way of talking on this Subject is, that there is no Difference between taking the sinking Fund and raising Money by new Taxes; but in Cases, where This is done by contracting irredeemable Debts, as in the many Instances beforementioned, the foregoing Arguments are sufficient to shew the contrary in the strongest Light,

To

To This We must add another Consideration, which perhaps may have no small Weight with the Majority of the Kingdom; for as They do not seem to be convinced of any urgent Necessity for such very large Supplies, of late Years, They may possibly think that if the Facility of raising Money, in THIS WAY, had not been allowed, the Publick might have saved some MILLIONS; since few Ministers would have had the Resolution to propose levying these Sums upon the People by NEW TAXES, in Times of Peace. They may think, perhaps, that the antient Spirit of a British Parliament would not have suffered Themselves to be braved into these Measures by such Threats as these; Take your Option, Gentlemen, and either let me raise Money THIS WAY, or prepare for a LAND-TAX of three or four Shillings in the Pound.—In this Case, I say, a British Parliament might possibly have exerted Themselves, and insisted on a Reduction of the Estimates to such a Sum, as the Nation was able to pay, under their present Circumstances, within the Year. Thus would They have deserved the Blessings of the present Age and of latest Posterity, by delivering their Country from those Difficulties and Distresses, which such temporary Expedients may bring upon it; for if We should be unhappily plung'd into a War, that now threatens all Europe, under a Disadvantage, which the Nation never had before, of being engaged against the united Powers of France, Spain and Sardinia; the Surplusses of the sinking Fund may probably produce but little; and in Case the Parliament should be obliged to borrow Money at an higher Interest than is allow'd the Proprietors of the present national Debt, contracted before Christmas 1716; would it not be thought very severe Usage, to see the old Creditors

of

of the Publick paid a lower Interest than the new, and perhaps for Money borrow'd on those very Securities, which the former thought unalienably appropriated to the Payment of their Debts; especially, when They find the Value of their Estates at the same Time daily decreasing, in Proportion to the higher Interest given to these new Adventurers on the publick Faith; would not This, I say, be some small Disgrace to that glorious Administration, which was said to be founded on the most perfect Knowledge of publick Credit, and is supported, as They have often boasted, by the flourishing State of it?—Let us farther suppose that the publick Creditors should in a Body petition to have the Benefit of the sinking Fund restor'd to Them, or their Interest made equal to the Lenders on new Loans; would rejecting their Petition mend the State of Credit, in a Time of Distress? Or would it not be said that They had some Reason on their Side; since by taking the sinking Fund from Them, our Taxes must be the longer continued, which makes Living as dear as it was before, when They received 6 per Cent?—I believe, it hath been formerly thought for the Interest of the Kingdom, that Reduction of Interest and Abatement of Taxes should always go Hand in Hand.

To This We may add their suffering by being paid off Part of their Principal, when they lost 10 l. per Cent. or more by it; for it is probable that most of the original Subscribers at Par are not now the Proprietors; and the poor Widow and Orphan, if the Payments were continued, might have an Opportunity of recovering, in some Measure, their former Losses.

One cannot reflect on this Subject without wishing that a Proposal, mention'd some Years since, had been accepted; viz. That the natural-born

Sub-

(48)

Subjects of Great Britain, who desired it, might have been at Liberty to subscribe any Part of their Debts upon ANNUITIES FOR LIVES to such a Sum as the SINKING FUND would have answer'd. Such an Option would have been very agreeable to many of the publick Creditors; and it is easy to shew the Advantages, which would have resulted from it to the Kingdom. But if This had not been approved, a very little Thought would have put the Creditors into some Method of Payment, which would not have expos'd Them to the Harpies of Exchange Alley, as They have lately been; and every Body must be sensible that a more ruinous Manner of treating Them, in this Respect, could not have been devised, if there had actually been a fix'd Intention, as nobody can suppose there was, of wasting and destroying by Degrees the money'd Interest of the Kingdom. I say, nobody can suppose any such Intention; because the Property of about FIFTY MILLIONS, which cannot be injured without affecting the whole Kingdom, will always be worth the Care of any Minister, and without arbitrary Power must bring Distress upon his own Affairs.

This, I am sure, was the Manner of Reasoning, with Regard to the sinking Fund, but a very few Years ago; when it was thought by all Parties that, like a Pyramid, it was never to be revers'd, without crushing the Undertakers by its Weight. The Writer of an Essay on the publick Debts, &c. (which was, in a particular Manner, recommended by an honourable Gentleman, as being perfectly agreeable to his own Way of Thinking) takes great Pains to shew the Improbability that any Minister should, even in the most pressing Exigencies, divert or apply the sinking Fund to any other Use or Purpose whatsoever than the Payment of our

(49)

our Debts, to which it is appropriated. I shall quote only one Passage to this Effect, where our Author delivers Himself in the following Manner, viz.

“ * And that the sinking Fund will, from Time “ to Time, be apply'd to the Discharge of the “ publick Debts, and not be diverted or apply'd to “ any other Purpose whatsoever, is what I think “ We may securely promise our selves, from con“ sidering that the asore said Fund hath been ap“ propriated to that Purpose by the Legislature,
“ and our publick Faith in the same Manner en“ gaged to the Creditors of the Government, that “ the Surplus of the asore said Duties should be ap“ ply'd to the Discharge of the Principal of their “ Debts, as the Funds Themselves to the Pay“ ment of the Interest, or Annuities, contracted “ for; which Faith of the Publick, in this Man“ ner engaged, I think We have all the Reason
“ in the World to believe will be as inviolably “ observed in This as in any other Part of their “ Contract with the Proprietors of the publick
“ Debts.

He then proceeds to shew the legal Appropriation of it, from the many Acts of Parliament to this Purpose, and the Right, which the publick Creditors have to it, as may be there seen at large, almost from one End of his Book to the other.

The perfect, undisturb'd Security, which every Man enjoys in his Property, is the very Essence of a free Government; and if Property, of all Kinds, is not held equally sacred, none will be so in a little Time ; for the attacking of one will pave the Way to the Destruction of all.
G little

(50)

We cannot have a more instructive and melancholy Instance of This than in the Case of Sweden; where the * two Colleges of REDUCTION and LIQUIDATION, as they were call'd, being established to consider of Means for relieving the Necessities of the Government, and to discharge the vast Debts contracted in the War; They first proceeded, by various Methods of Injustice, to annihilate the Debts of the Crown. But what followed? The Titles of all Lands, which formerly belong'd to the Crown, and the Considerations, on which the Possessors came by them, being examined, most of them were seiz'd and reunited to the Crown, on pretended Flaws in their Titles; which may be easily enough found in the best-settled Estates, when Enquiries of this Kind are set on Foot. In some Cases, a small Allowance was made to the Owners, and in many none; so that Numbers of the most antient Families, who had deserved best of the Crown, were seen begging their Bread at the Palace Gates.

As Acts of Injustice seldom stop, these Proceedings were soon after carry'd into Livonia; where the People insisted very strongly on the Preservation of their Properties, because They had not renounced their Liberties and Privileges, as the States of Sweden had done.

The † Author, from whom I take this Account, tells us that the Commissioners beginning with the greater Nobility first, the inferior Nobles were unconcern'd at it; for They were persuaded to believe that it would be a great Advantage to Them, by

* See an Account of Sweden,
† An Account of Livonia,

(51)

by enabling the Crown to diminish the publick Charge and Taxes. This was the Argument, that at first lulled them asleep and made Them not join in the common Danger, whilst They might have prevented it. But They were soon convinc'd of this fatal Error; for after the Commissioners had seiz'd the great Estates, They laid the same heavy Hands on the Properties of the less Nobility and Gentlemen, who then endeavour'd, by Supplications, Protections and Remonstrances against these Violences, to divert their impending Ruin; but it was too late; and the extreme Necessities, to which They were reduced, having forced the States of Livonia, in the Year 1692, to make an Address to the King, in the most humble and moving Manner, representing the Distresses They suffer'd; this Petition was called a capital Crime; Complaints and Rejoicings being equally criminal, when a Nation is thus far subdued, or in the Advances towards it. The Nobility, who sign'd the Address, were summon'd to Stockholm in the Year 1694; where their Supplication being declared seditionous, and They commanded to answer this Charge, They very justly alledged, in their Defence, that They sign'd the Petition not as Principals, but according to Custom and Form, in an Assembly of the Livonian Nobility. No Regard was had to this Plea; and They being animated with the glorious Spirit of Liberty, even under all these Pressures and Dangers, to refuse any farther Answer to so unjust an Accusation, They were condemned to be beheaded and their Estates confiscated; but by the Intercession made to stop the Execution of so barbarous and inhuman a Sentence, it was changed into Imprisonment, where they lay two Years and an half, till Remorse of Conscience, on the King's Death-bed, induced

Him to sign an Order for their Release, and They had the Indulgence to starve at Liberty.

These Proceedings were the Occasion of the famous Count Patkull's joining with the King of Poland; and as the Opposition, which He had made in Defence of the Liberties of his Country, was never to be forgotten, even by the Successor Charles the 12th, it is well known how He fell a Sacrifice to the Resentments of that obstinate, haughty, unforgiving Monarch, instigated by the Advice of an avaricious and vindictive Minister; and the Horrors of his Death closed this melancholy Scene.

I believe the Reader will not be displeas'd with this Digression, which is far from being impertinent to the present Subject. I shall now return to it, and make some Observations on the Facts before stated.

No Man hath a stronger Sense of our present great Load of Debts than my self, nor wishes more heartily to see them paid off, as soon as possible; yet being equally sensible of the many heavy Taxes, which impoverish the People, and depress our Trade; my Zeal hath never induced me, in Imitation of some others, to propose any new Tax for the Augmentation of the sinking Fund, in order to hasten the Payment of them; being fully satisfied that if it had been religiously apply'd to this Service, as it was wisely and honestly design'd, it would have effectually answer'd this desirable End, without any new Burthens.

But as the People have been put to such extraordinary Expences, and the foregoing Sums have been taken from the sinking Fund, since the Year 1721; it may be of some Use to shew what Progress this Money would have made in lessening the publick Debt, Debt, in Case it had been apply'd to that Service; and the Account will stand thus.

The annual Sum of 36,200 l. for former Pensions, from Michaelmas 1720 to the 24th of June 1727, reckoning Interest at 5 l. per Cent. and from the 24th of June 1727, to Christmas 1733, reckoning Interest at 4 l. per Cent. would have paid off a Debt of — — — } L. 625,000

The 100,000 l. per Ann. Surplus, from the 24th of June 1727, to Christmas 1733, at 4 l. per Cent. would have paid off a Debt of — — — } 725,900

The 16,400 l. per Ann. remaining of the Queen's Civil-List Lottery in 1713, from the 24th of June 1728 to the same Time, — — — } 98,700

In Part of the Million towards Payment of the Navy Debt, 290,900 l. from the 24th of June 1722, to the 24th of June 1727, at 5 l. per Cent. and from thence to Christmas 1733, at 4 l. per Cent. would have paid off a Debt of — — — } 479,000

The two Millions given to the South Sea Company, for the same Time, at the same Rate of Interest, would have paid off — — — } 3,293,600

The 144,000 l. taken at different Times from the sinking Fund, reckoning it at a Medium of seven Years, at 4 l. per Cent. would have paid off } 189,400

Carried forwards — 5,411,600 l.
Brought

(54)

Brought forwards —	5,411,600 l.
The 36,600 l. lost to the Publick, by the Duties on Hawkers and Pedlars , from the 24th of June 1723, to the 24th of June 1727, at 5 l. per Cent. and from thence to Christmas 1733, at 4 l. per Cent. would have paid off —	53,100

	5,464,700
If We add to This the annual Sum of 1,202,000 l. which, according to the forementioned Estimate, might have been saved to the Publick, this Sum from Christmas 1721 at 5 l. per Cent. and from thence to Christmas 1733 at 4 l. per Cent. would have paid off a Debt of	18,273,900

Total 23,738,600.

If therefore the frugal Measures beforementioned had been pursued, there might have been paid off by these Savings at Christmas 1733, near TWENTY FOUR MILLIONS, more than have been.

I desire the Reader to take Notice that I do not bring into this Calculation the Produce of any of the Duties taken from the sinking Fund, for the Use of the current Expences within this Time; They being included under that Head, and consequently go towards the general Articles of Extraordinaries before-mentioned.

It will now, I believe, be very acceptable to the Reader to see what Sum would have remained unpaid of the national Debt, at Christmas 1733, in Case the foregoing Sums, with the Produce of the Remainder of the sinking Fund, had been apply'd to this Service, and no new Debts had been contracted.

The

(55)

The Account of the Debt, delivered to the House of Commons the 14th of March 1716, amounts to 46,613,100 l. and there then remain'd unpaid of the Navy Debt 709,096 l. These Sums make together near FORTY SEVEN MILLIONS, three hundred twenty two thousand, two hundred Pounds.

But, by an unparalleled Management of the publick Money, as was fully * explained some Years ago, the Arrears due to the Army were made to amount to above TWO MILLIONS, which was so surprizing to the House of Commons, that a Motion was made in April 1721 to enquire by what extraordinary Means such a vast Debt was fix'd on the Kingdom; but, like all Motions of that Kind had a Negative put upon it. This, with the Navy Debt, and some other Articles due before 1716, but not included in the Account from the Exchequer before-mentioned, made the national Debt at Christmas 1716, to be generally computed at FIFTY ONE MILLIONS; and, to obviate all Disputes, I shall add to it the Sum of 3,123,000 l. allowed to the long and short Annuitants, on the Subscription of their Debts to the South-Sea Company; and then the Debt will stand as follows, viz.

Some Considerations on the national Debts, &c.

The

The national Debt on the 24th of Dec. 1716. ———— } l. 54,123,000	There hath been paid off, in Part of this Debt, from Christmas 1716 to Christmas last, by the Produce of the Funds themselves, or by the sinking Fund, (not to trouble the Reader with minute Particulars) above ———— } l. 14,200,000	Produce of the several Exceedings before-mentioned ———— } 37,938,600	Remains 16,184,400
---	--	--	---------------------------

I think there cannot be a more persuasive Motive to recommend good Husbandry than the View of this short State; from whence it is evident that, by a wise and frugal Management, (the only Mine left us) and without raising any more Money on the People than what They have actually paid since the Year 1721, the national Debt might have been reduced, at Christmas last, to SIXTEEN MILLIONS, one hundred eighty-four thousand, four hundred Pounds.

I believe nobody, who hath the least Concern for the Happiness, I may say, the Safety of Himself and his Family, can turn his Eyes from this agreeable Prospect to what is really our Case at present, without feeling the most sensible Grief and Indignation.

By

By an Account delivered to the House of Lords, in February last, (supposing the Payment of the Million to the South-Sea Company to have been compleated) the present Debt is

The Civil List Debt ———— } l. 1,000,000	The Navy Debt, on the 31st of Dec. 1733 ———— } 1,713,900	National Debts on the 31st of Dec. last ———— } l. 50,020,500
---	---	--

The Reader will see that I generally make Use of round Numbers, but always less than the true Sum; and in the above FIFTY MILLIONS, there is nothing reckoned for the Deficiencies of the annual Supplies.

I hope there are no Mistakes in the foregoing Accounts and Calculations, having taken the best Care I can to prevent any; but if there should be any, I shall be very glad to see them corrected.

From hence we may see, in its full and proper Light, the blessed Fruits of that UNIFORM SYSTEM OF CREDIT, which hath been constantly kept in View and pursued in every Direction and Management, relating to the PUBLICK DEBT. This was the Language of a certain, honourable Gentleman, but a few Years ago; when He was likewise pleased to assure us that the whole Machine of Paper Credit had been employed to no other Purposes than the Reduction and Diminution of this Debt. But I leave every Reader to judge, from the foregoing Particulars, whether his Practices have in any Degree answer'd his Professions; or whether our national Burthens have not constantly increas'd, on one Hand, as fast as the sinking Fund hath reliev'd them, on the other, till at last this sacred Treasure it self fell a Sacrifice to the annual Expences, which his Conduct hath brought upon us. The Reader will likewise observe that He did not venture to do This at once, but proceeded by regular Degrees; first, by distinguishing some particular Surplusses out of it; then by siezing a large Part of it without any Disguise, as Difficulties press'd upon Him; and, at last, diverting the whole Produce from the original Purposes, to which it was most solemnly appropriated by many Acts of Parliament.

H ed

(50)

This I apprehend to be a true State of our Conduct at home, with Relation to MONEY-MATTERS, from the Year 1721 to the present Time; which is fully illustrated and confirm'd by what hath been said in the former Part, concerning the Management of FOREIGN AFFAIRS; for till the Falsity of that Deduction is proved by authentick Facts and solid Arguments, which hath never yet been attempted, the extraordinary Expences beforementioned will appear to have been unnecessary, and consequently the Produce of the sinking Fund might have been preserv'd inviolate, for the Security of the publick Creditors, and the Payment of the national Debt, to which it was appropriated.

It is this exact Conformity between the Progress of our foreign and domestick Affairs, which constitutes our present, unhappy Situation. These Transactions are so closely complicated and blended together, that it is somewhat difficult to divide them, or to say precisely which hath contributed most largely to our present Misfortunes. But our late Politicks at home are certainly more irretrievable than our Politicks abroad; for if We had only embarrass'd ourselves with a Multitude of Engagements with foreign Powers, which some People think contradictory, and taken an Opportunity, at the same Time, of recovering our Finances, We might have weather'd the Storm, which now threatens all Europe, and work'd our selves out of those Difficulties, which surround us, by the natural Strength and Spirit of this Nation. But the Case is vastly different, when all the Sources of publick publick Wealth are already drain'd, by the Anticipation of our Funds, and even the Prospect of redeeming them, by the Payment of our Debts, is now taken away.

Under these Circumstances, I believe our ablest Ministers, fruitful as their Inventions may be in devising new Taxes, and assisted by the whole Band of Excise-Projectors, will be puzzled to raise a much greater Sum to carry on a War, than hath been lately expended in Time of Peace; since I cannot think any Man so desperate, notwithstanding some late Insinuations, as to propose the DOUBLING all our present grievous and oppressive Taxes, which cannot be done with the same Ease, that the sinking Fund hath been alienated from its first sacred Institution to the current Services of the Year; for supposing it intended that the sinking Fund is to be mortgaged out again for new Debts; is it to be imagined that money'd Companies, which subsist on Credit only, will be very fond of advancing Loans on such a Security; or that their Proprietors will be easily persuaded to accept of a PERPETUAL ANNUITY; with this material Difference from all other Annuities, that in Case the Stocks should happen to rise, by any Accident, or Artifice in the Management of publick Credit, the Mortgager shall be at Liberty to pay Them off to their Loss; but if They should fall to half their Value, and They could make a better Interest of their Money, They shall then be ty'd down to their Annuity; especially, when They see, at the same Time, that heaping up these irredeemable Debts on the Nation must involve us in such Difficulties, as may render their Estates very precarious, and even endanger the Loss of them?—Our ablest Ministers, I say, would find it very difficult to provide for a War, under these Circumstances, though it should be intended to exert all that Power, which hath been lately devolved upon them, in so ample a Manner.

(60)

The Reader will be under no Difficulty to guess that I mean the late most extraordinary Vote of CONFIDENCE and CREDIT, which surpasses ALL TRUSTS of the same Kind, that ever yet received the Sanction and Authority of Parliament; as it seems to be grounded on the slightest Pretences, that were ever offer'd upon such an Occasion, and countenanc'd by Precedents, which fall infinitely short of it.

The first, alledg'd on this Occasion, was in the Year 1702; when the Nation was in actual War, and the Queen laid before the House several Memorials and Representations from the States of Holland, desiring her Majesty to increase her Forces, for the better enabling Them to oppose the great Preparations making in France; upon which the House came to a Resolution, empowering her Majesty to augment her Forces, in Conjunction with Holland.

In 1715, at the Time of an actual Rebellion, his late Majesty was empower'd to increase the Land Forces; and in 1719, it having been represented to both Houses, in a Speech from the Throne, that his Majesty had received Advice of an intended Invasion, He was authorized to augment his Forces by Sea.

Is there the least Resemblance between any of these Precedents and our present Situation in full Peace; when no Danger is so much as insinuated but from a French Squadron, that was fitting out, to take the Convoy of some Land Forces, which every Body believes are intended for Dantzick. To this Alarm, indeed, there was added the Weakness of the Barrier in Flanders; though, by the Way, it was not so much as pretended that the States of Holland, who are so immediately concern'd, had made the least Application about it. Nay, every Man, who reads the common News-papers and sees in what Manner the Forces of France are now

(61)

now engaged in Italy and on the Rhine, must be fully convinced that if Great Britain will let Them quietly pursue their Designs in those Parts, their own Interest (a much stronger Obligation than any Treaties) will not suffer Them to provoke us, either by an Invasion, or attacking the Barrier of the Dutch; and We might have lived more safely without a Troop, or a Company this Year, than at any Time for these forty Years past.

If any new Alliances, or Provisions were necessary to be made, with Regard to the present Circumstances of Europe, was there not the same Occasion before the Parliament met; and might not They have been called sooner, or kept some Time longer, before their Dissolution, 'till it was seen, by the Operations of the Campaign, what Part it was proper for Great Britain to act, and to have shewn Them the Decency, at least, of taking their Advice upon it? Would not This have been more agreeable to our Constitution, at such a critical Conjunction, than to desire that the present Safety and future Happiness of a whole People should, in the most implicit Manner, be left to their Discretion, whose past Conduct hath brought these Difficulties upon us, and given Them the only Pretence for drawing such an enormous Power into their own Hands?

For by this Vote our Forces by Sea and Land may not only be augmented; but any Number of foreign Troops may be poured into the Kingdom, upon as good a Pretence as can be given for bringing over six or eight Regiments from Ireland; since if any Danger really threatens us, nobody can think that it would be proper to leave that Kingdom exposed, where there are certainly great Numbers of PAPISTS and JACOBITES.

I leave it therefore to be considered, whether the People of England may not apprehend that these Forces are sent for over to awe the Elections; and that that

that if any Tumults can be artfully fomented, it may be made a Pretence for continuing a greater Army on the Kingdom; all Opportunities being taken to increase it, as was done this Year, by adding to the last Year's Forces a Number of Men, equal to the three Regiments, which have been some Time at Gibraltar, but have till now been Part of the Establishment of Guards and Garrisons.

It is well known that an English Parliament would not permit our glorious Deliverer King William to keep his own Regiment of Dutch Guards in this Kingdom, even at a Time, when real Plots and Conspiracies against Him had been discovered; nor did this Refusal proceed from Tories and Jacobites only, as some Persons have foolishly asserted, but from the truest Friends to our Liberties and Constitution; who argued very justly that his Majesty had a sufficient Body of English Guards to defend his Person, as far as Guards could defend it, and wisely foresaw that one foreign Regiment might be made a Precedent, according to Custom, for introducing more; 'till at last a whole Army of them might be established amongst us. These were the true Reasons for sending back the Dutch Guards; and yet, by the late Vote of CONFIDENCE, it is in the Power of the Administration to bring over as many Hanoverians, Hessians, or other foreign Troops, as They please, according to Law.—I do not say, or suppose, that any such Thing will be done; but only mention it to shew what an unbounded Latitude the Parliament hath given Them.

To these Powers there is added a Liberty of expending any Sum of Money They please, and for what Purposes They please; which seems to have no very good Appearance so near the Election of a NEW SEPTENNIAL PARLIAMENT; for notwithstanding some late confident Assertions, that none of the publick Money can be apply'd in this Manner;
is

is any Thing more easy to be done, under the Name of Subsidies to foreign Princes, or Conventions for taking foreign Troops into our Pay; and is there a Prince abroad, who, in Consideration of a good Bargain, will refuse to give a Receipt for three hundred thousand Pounds, though He may be content, perhaps, with half the Sum? By these Means, it is in the Power of any Minister, arm'd with such an unlimited Confidence, to procure Money for private Purposes, without the Knowledge of PARLIAMENT, or even of the KING Himself. Nay, something of this Kind hath been lately done, with Regard to the Hessians, as was observed in Politics on both Sides; for when a Demand was made in Parliament for the Sum of 22,694 l. 7 s. 6 d. to compleat a Subsidy, stipulated to be paid by France, to the King of * Denmark; it appeared to the House that a large Sum had been already paid, to the same Use, out of the Money granted for the Pay of 12,000 Hessians; and when it was moved to enquire whether any farther Deductions had been made out of that Money, the Motion was rejected.

Indeed, it is scarce credible that, at the latter End of a Session, and even on the very Point of a Dissolution, when many Gentlemen were gone out of Town; (on the Presumption, if not an Assurance, that no more Business of any Consequence would be brought into the House,) I say, it is scarce credible that any Number of Gentlemen could have been induced to concur in such a Vote, but THOSE, who have forfeited all Hopes of returning to their Seats in Parliament, unless by the Influence of that exorbitant Power, which Theyselfes had created, perhaps, for that very Purpose.

Nor can any Proceeding be more dangerous, and even contrary to all the Methods and Usages of Parliament,

* The whole Sum paid by England, on this Account was 58,667 l. 00 06.

liament, than after a Session of many Months, when the Services and Estimates had been duly considered, the Supplies voted and appropriated, to insert a Clause in the same Bill, unappropriating the whole again, and leaving all Deficiencies, which the Extravagance of a Minister may create, to be provided for by a new Parliament.

If This is our Case, are not the People of Great Britain, at this Hour, under as absolute and uncontroul'd a Power as any of our neighbouring Nations, except the Privilege We enjoy by the Habeas Corpus Act; and have We any thing to depend on, besides his Majesty's great Goodness in preserving and restoring to us those precious Liberties, which our Representatives have thus deposited in the Hands of his Ministers? It is certain that They cannot want this unusual and extraordinary Power, in any Exigency; for in Cases of an Invasion, or any other visible Necessity, all Governments, limited as well as absolute, must be vested with a Power of Self-Defence; and why should not this legal Prerogative be thought sufficient? I am afraid the Reason was not to compliment the Parliament, as it was said, but to give the Ministers a Colour to exert this Power, at Pleasure, under Pretence of an Exigency, which could not be justify'd by the Prerogative but from a real Exigency; and, perhaps, to habituate Parliaments, by repeated Precedents, to the Delegation of this Power, till it becomes the common Conclusion of every Session. Thus a Sanction may be given to all the Profusions and Oppressions of wicked Ministers, during the Intervals of Parliaments, by engaging Them blindly beforehand to authenticate Measures, which would probably be condemn'd without such a previous Commission.

But supposing that no Attempts should be made upon us, which I believe every rational Man is far from apprehending; We shall certainly be told that our our Security is owing to this seasonable Trust, which struck a Terror into foreign Princes; and from thence a stronger Argument will be drawn for the Repetition of it.

I cannot close this Head, without leaving it to the serious Consideration of every Englishman how far such Practices contribute to that Reverence for Parliaments, which ought always to be preserved amongst the People; and whether They may not be apt, upon these Occasions, to recollect by what Steps and Approaches Slavery hath been imposed on our neighbouring Nations.

Dr. Robinson, in his Account of Sweden, tells us, "that so favourable was this Conjunction for the Advancement of the King's Authority, that He scarce needed to ask whatever He desired; each Body of the States striving which should outbid the other in their Concessions.—The Nobility and Gentry were obliged to keep Pace with the Officers of the Army, who sat in their House, and vigorously promoted the King's Affairs."

It is a melancholy Consideration that such Schemes of Servitude are never so fatally conducted as by Those, who have formerly put on the Garb of Liberty, and built their Fortunes on that Foundation.

I cannot therefore conclude better than in the Words of Dr. Davenant, concerning the Danger of our Liberties from the WHIGs.

* "The TORIES, by taking Arms to defend their civil Rights, and by joining to depose that Prince, by whom those Rights were violated, have in the most publick Manner renounc'd their Doctrine of Jus divinum, passive Obedience and Non-Resistance."

"But if the WHIGs should hereafter take their Stations; if They should go upon that Ground,

* An Essay upon the probable Methods of making a People Gainers in the Ballance of Trade. p. 240.

“ Ground, which the Tories have quitted; if They “ should enter upon just such Measures; if They “ should pursue the same Counsels; if They “ should suffer Themselves to be imbibed with “ Tory Notions; our CONSTITUTION must be in“ tirely lost.

“ For They may undermine it without Suspici“ on. Who will be jealous of Those, who have “ been preaching up Liberty, and accusing arbitrary
 “ Ministers, for Thirty Years? Who will suspect “ such profess'd Patriots? They may change the “ Form of our Government, and have the People “ on their Side, who can have no Jealousy of “ Them; for the Whigs are the Favourites of the “ People, as having so often preserved England.
 “ No Person could be popular enough in Rome to “ think of subverting its Constitution in the Purity
 “ of the Commonwealth, but Manlius, who had “ saved the Capitol.

“ It will hardly be surmised that They can mean
 “ to enslave us, who (by their Actions, Speeches
 “ and Writings, for many Years) seem'd rather “ inclined to a Republick than a despotick Govern- “ ment. But if They should come to change “ their Minds, if They should throw off their “ former Principles, We shall be undone by the “ very Men, whom We thought our surest Friends.

“ If old Whigs should hunt after Places as much as “ ever the Tories did; and if like Them, upon Pre“ ferment, They should become quite new Men
 “ in Voting, Thinking and Speaking, in a Moment
 “ making a sudden Turn from the whole Course “ of their former Lives; if old Whigs, as the “ Tories did, should ever take Bribes and Pen- “ sions to betray their Trust; if They should do “ any Thing to break into the Habeas Corpus “ Act, which is the chief Guardian of our Liber“ ties; if They should oppose any good Act,
 “ for the frequent sitting of Parliaments, which “ Want

“ Want in the Constitution produced all our for“ mer Miseries; if They should openly oppose any “ reasonable Provision for Tryals in Treason,
 “ the Want of which hath lost many a noble Life,
 “ and for which heretofore They had so loudly “ called; if, as the Tories did, They should send “ their Emissaries about, to influence, or corrupt “ Elections; if old Whigs, to whom Meum and “ Tuum were once so sacred, should come to “ ruin a Society of Trading Men, and at one “ Blow destroy many hundred Families; (but “ God forbid Englishmen should ever have such “ a Thought!) if old Whigs shall persuade any “ future Prince to Closet Members, as was done
 “ in the preceding Reigns; if, by their Power,
 “ They should get Men turn'd out of Employ- “ ment, for pursuing the Dictates of their Con“ science and Understanding; if, like the Mini- “ sters heretofore complain'd of, They should “ have a Band of Pensioners ready to give up
 “ any Right, to grant any Sum, and to excuse, “ nay even to vote their Paymaster Thanks for “ any Male-Administration.

“ If the old Whigs should restore to Men
 “ the same dishonest Interest They had hereto“ fore; if They should consume us in their Mini- “ sterial, and sell us in their Legislative Capa- “ city; if They should desire to have Things “ govern'd rather by Tricks and little Arts, than “ according to the Direction of the Laws, or “ the Bent of the People; if They, who, upon the “ virtuous Principle of keeping England a free “ Country, in former Times, oppos'd all Excises, “ should be brought to create so many new Of- “ fices and Officers, as may influence Elections
 “ round the Kingdom; if They, who heretofore “ thought the best Way to preserve their civil “ Rights was to keep the Purse, and to have al“ ways

(00)

“ ways something to give, should be for settling “ such an immense Revenue on the Crown, as may “ make Parliaments unnecessary; if They, who “ were so careful, in King Charles's Reign, not “ to burthen the Nation with Taxes, should give “ away the People's Wealth, as if England were “ a Mine of Treasure never to be exhausted;
 “ If the very Men, who have * asserted and “ claim'd it to be their true, antient and indu- “ bitable Right, and that it ought to be esteem'd, “ allow'd, adjudg'd and deem'd, that the raising,
 “ or keeping a Standing Army within the King- “ dom, in Time of Peace, unless it be with the “ Consent of Parliament, is against Law; if They,
 “ who once believed this Eagle in the Air fright-“ ed all Motions towards Liberty; if They, who “ heretofore thought Armies, in Time of Peace,
 “ and our *Freedom*s inconsistent; if the same Men “ should throw off a Whig Principle so fundamen“ tal; if They should become the open Advocates
 “ for standing Forces;
 “ If in this Manner the old Whigs, whose “ Foresight and Courage have hitherto preserved “ England, should quite change their Minds, and “ go thus retrograde from all their former Speech- “ es, Actions and Counsels; if They should thus “ come to cloath Themselves in the foul, ridicu“ lous and detested Garments of the Tories, and “ give into the worst of their Measures; and if “ all, that hath been here discours'd, should hap“ pen, then would the Constitution of this Country
 “ be utterly subverted.

* Act declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subjects.

F I N I S.