And of the moft Eminent

A DISTINCT LIST of the BOOKSELLERS,

AND

An Account of the moft valuable Englifh Works printed for each of them.

I N T R O D U C T I O N .

AFTER a strict and impartial examination of all the printed Lists of Merchants and Traders of the city of London, that have been hitherto published, I find myself obliged to declare, that they are extremely imperfect; several persons being inserted as Merchants, who have not the least pretence to that very important and honourable title, in any shape whatever: others again are denominated Merchants, who keep retail Millinery and Haberdashery Shops, merely because they have, perhaps once or twice, imported some trifling commodity, and made a few entries at the Custom-house. In a Commercial State it is highly necessary that the Merchants, who are its chief support, should be accurately and distinctly pointed out, for the benefit of Foreigners, and likewise of such considerable Wholesale Dealers as may find their account in applying to them for the several commodities they import, instead of purchasing of the Warehousemen, who often stile themselves Merchants, for the very purpose of selling to persons who are more considerable than themselves; whereas their proper business, to pursue the regular channel of Trade, is, to supply the mere Retailer. In the following sheets I have endeavoured to form a just barrier between the Merchants, and the Warehousemen and Shopkeepers, by admitting none into the List of Merchants but such as are so in every sense of the word: with these I have joined the Factors, because most of them are Merchants, as most Merchants are in some respects Factors; and in the present state of our Foreign Commerce, it may, in many respects, be very hard to distinguish the Merchants that are not Factors, or the Factors that are not in some respects Merchants: thus, for instance, the Corn Factor, who exports his Grain to foreign countries, may import some commodities in return on his own account, and thereby become a Merchant; or the Merchant trading to America, may have Commissions from thence for various commodities, entirely foreign to his own particular branch of commerce, and by purchasing these, and charging Commission on them, may be in reality a Factor: I therefore judged it improper to separate them. And, as far as I have been able to procure certain intelligence, I have added to the Names and Places of Abode of the Merchants, the names of the Countries they trade to; and with the Address of the Factors I have given the Commodities they are Agents in. Some few of the Merchants still remain undetermined as to the Parts of the Globe they stand connected with; but these are but a few, and time and the encouragement and assistance of the public may enable me hereafter totally to complete the List; in the mean time it is to be observed, that those that are not filled up, are either General Merchants, trading to a great many different Countries, or are not so well known as the rest, and therefore more certain information could not be procured. Nothing now remains to render the following List of Merchants useful in the Mercantile World, but briefly to mention the principal Commodities imported from, and exported to the several Countries that are particularized in the List.

4 INTRODUCTION.

The WEST INDIA Merchants export Wearing Apparel, Furniture, Drugs, Hard-ware, Jewels, Toys, Irish and Scots Linens, English Beer, &c. and in return they import Rum, Sugar, Cotton, Mahogany, Lignum Vitæ, Logwood, Indico, &c.

6 INTRODUCTION.

A
OF THE
PRINCIPAL BOOKSELLERS
LONDON and WESTMINSTER.

On applying to the Booksellers for a List of the several Capital Works printed for each, agreeable to my first plan, I found that the property of the principal Copies was divided into so many Shares, and changed hands so often, that it would be impossible to ascertain, with any accuracy, to whom they belonged; I was therefore obliged to drop this part of my design, lest it should be productive of litigation, instead of utility. In the following List, however, distinct mention is made of the particular branch of business for which each Bookseller is remarkable.
